

HYDERABAD DECLARATION

TELANGANA STATE MILLET COALITION

Sundaraiah Vigyana Kendra, Baglingampally, Hyderabad, Telangana

We, the members of Telangana State Millets Coalition, having met and discussed today about the critical need for regeneration of millets, have come to the following conclusions after a daylong consultation at Hyderabad.

1. We believe that millets, which are an integral part of Telangana's culture and agriculture, should play a vital role in the building a Golden Telangana.
2. Many factors contribute to our faith in millets: In a state haunted by the malnutrition of young children, women and the poor, millets with their extraordinary capacity for providing nutrition can act as an elixir in this regeneration of Telangana.
3. Since most of Telangana is made up of poor soils (especially those belonging to the poor) it is essential that we find crops that can withstand these harsh conditions and provide food and nutrition for the population as the most important need for a food and nutrition secure future of Telangana.
4. When we look at the future, distant and not-so-distant, we must seriously count the threats posed by the coming decades of climate crisis. This will be marked by low and erratic rainfall, increasing global warming and malnutrition of an epidemic proportion. The only crops that can counter all these threats are millets.
5. In spite of all these extraordinary credentials of millets, sadly there is a steady decline in the area of millet cultivation in Telangana since last 10 years.
6. Corresponding to this decline is the phenomenal increase in the area under cultivation of commercial crops such as cotton, corn, cane, soy. All these crops, unlike millets, demand irrigation thus overturning the fascinating knowledge based dry land agriculture nurtured by the peasantry of Telangana that was fiercely independent and self reliant.

In the face of these realities TelanganaCoalition for Millets makes the following demands

- a) Declare Telangana a Millet State and accord millets the status of a State Crop.
- b) To help the revival of millets announce a series of guarantees to millet farmers
- c) Fix a Minimum Support Price at the state level that is double the cost of production of millets.
- d) Declare water conservation bonus, nutrition bonus and ecological bonus to millet farmers.
- e) In view of the phenomenal ecological services they are rendering together these bonuses can add up to at least Rs.5000/- per acre.
- f) As in the case of Karnataka introduce millets in the Public Distribution System.
- g) Introduce millets in MGNREGA, ICDS program, Mid-Day-Mealprogram, Social welfare hostels and other public food programs.
- h) In all government offices open millet canteensto inculcate the habit of consumption of nutritious and ecological food.
- i) Launch a universal Nutrition-cum-Health Education programme as a part of this package so the people at all levels, especially the poor, get to know what is good for them, their children and families in terms of nutrition and health.

Think of any other measures from the government including a strong and steady campaign to promote millet consumption especially among the poor. (See what Latin America has done for Quinoa) It is an irony of our times that while the privileged and urban middle classes are coming back to millets realising their great qualities, the rural poor are turning away from them, because of disinformation, skewed status value and other historic injustices.

When Telangana is grappling with the opportunity and challenges of building a BangaruTelangana (Golden Telangana)its path must be made of Millets.
